Adobe Photoshop Elements is an alternative to Photoshop. It is a graphics editor for photographers, image editors and hobbyists. It contains most of the features of the professional version but with fewer features and a simpler user interface. Photoshop Elements is included with new Macs (including MacBook) running the Mojave operating system. Previously it was only available for Windows. Access to the Adobe Creative Cloud, Adobe Stock, Adobe Story, and Adobe Inspire are included with Elements. Photoshop is included with these applications. There are plans for these Adobe programs to be free. Until then they are paid applications. (Adobe Stock costs $9.99/month, Creative Cloud is free, Inspire is free, and Story is free.) The price of Photoshop Elements is either $75 or $119.35 with a discount from $99.99 to $69.95 available for students or active military personnel. To buy Adobe Photoshop Elements: Buy It Here On September 30, 2019, Photoshop for Windows will receive its final update. Up until then, it will work, but may be buggy. When using an iPad, iPhone or iPad Mini, one can access Adobe software via an Adobe for iOS app from the Apple App Store for free. Elements 15 is the latest version of the software. There is also a free version available (15.0.1). The next version will be 16.0. Adobe Photoshop Elements has an availability of $69.95 for non-members of the Adobe Creative Cloud, and members get access to a free trial. Adobe Photoshop Elements is a graphics program that includes many features of Photoshop. You can edit, color correct, correct exposure, crop, draw, enlarge, create a mask, use many filters and much more. You can also create a Smart Object and save files for Photoshop and other programs. MV Markov MV Markov was a Soviet cargo ship captured by the Royal Navy during the Second World War. She was interned in Cuba in 1945, and sold to the Greek government in 1946. She sank off the Greek island of Nisyros in 1952. History The ship was built in 1928 by Finnish owners Gjøenholm for the Swedish and Norwegian steam merchant company Sweden-America Line. Renamed she was bought by Soviet government and used to transport troops and materiel to the Baltic Sea in September 1939. Her new USSR-built engines of SIB giving her good speed. An escort of four British destroyers and the sloop, in the latter case acting as a convoy escort, escorted her from Leningrad to Tallinn in Estonia. She arrived at Tallinn on 28 September and was loaded with a cargo of petrol and ammunition. The convoy took her to Libau in Latvia, where there was a Royal Navy escort. On 2 October she left the convoy to cross the Baltic Sea. While crossing, she was torpedoed by German submarine, which fired two torpedoes of. As Markov was listing heavily, her crew put her stern up to prevent her sinking. While the Germans surfaced to finish her off, her crew was ordered by, the commanding officer, to abandon ship. They abandoned ship some time before her stern was lifted off the water, but the stern was washed over the side of the ship when the Germans surfaced to finish her off. Her cargo of petrol and ammunition ignited and the entire ship caught fire. She sank at 08:50 on 3 October, with the loss of just one person on board. Her wreck was located by a Greek salvage company in May 2012 and a rescue operation for the eight survivors was begun. Neural correlates of the cognitive dissociation of feelings: an ERP investigation. Cognitive dissociation theory proposes that some emotions can be experienced as positive and pleasant, whereas others can be experienced as negative and unpleasant. Here we report the effects of cognitive dissociation on the cerebral correlates of feeling valence using event-related potentials (ERPs). Specifically, we investigated whether the N350 and P400, which have been associated with the processing of valence, would be differently modulated by the detection of positive and negative emotional expressions, as predicted by cognitive dissociation theory. Healthy individuals performed a dot-probe task during which positive, negative, and neutral facial expressions were presented. A dual-process model of emotion posits that (1) positive affective experiences follow from the sustained attention to the stimulus, which results in greater activity and greater habituation of N350 amplitude (indicative of attentional facilitation) and (2) negative affective experiences follow from the orienting response to the stimulus, which results in greater activity and increased attentional inhibition of P400 amplitude (indicative of attentional inhibition). We found that both N350 and P400 amplitudes were sensitive to the valence of the facial expressions, and they were differentially modulated by positive and negative expressions. We also found greater N350 and P400 amplitudes in response to negative expressions compared with positive expressions, suggesting that cognitive dissociation in response to negative expressions might be a reliable marker of the experience of emotional negativity. Outbreak of highly pathogenic avian influenza H5N1 in clades 2.3.2 and 2.3.4 in the Mekong River Delta, Vietnam, November 2007-January 2008. In November 2007, the Mekong River Delta of northern Vietnam reported an outbreak of highly pathogenic avian influenza (HPAI) of the H5N1 subtype. National and provincial investigations were conducted from November 2007 to January 2008, and this report summarizes the results of this investigation. Throat and cloacal swabs from dead poultry and blood were tested for the presence of virus by real-time reverse transcriptase-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR). Of the 3,555 birds examined, 17 (0.5%) tested positive for HPAI H5N1. Thirteen of 17 isolates, collected from ten provinces in the Mekong River Delta, were genotyped as belonging to subclades 2.3.2 and 2.3.4
