Modify the volume of each individual tab with this simple-to-use extension. Control your audio Prowl's design Rather than being satisfied with simple, dark, uniform interfaces, Chrome developer Prowl Studios has included a strong theme into their new Prowl browser extension, and it's quite a striking one at that. This interface is nothing special in its looks, but the extension manages to do what a good browser extension should be able to do: it allows users to read blogs, check out the latest deals, and view all sorts of information right from within the browser. How's that for adding a whole new level to browsing? Coming into this browser extension, one doesn't expect it to be all too simple to use. With the amount of information it features, this thing could have been exponentially more complex. Instead of making it harder to get it up and running, the Chrome developers have kept things simple, and in doing so, have created a Prowl extension that's quite adept to use. Xamarati's design Setting up the browser extension couldn't be simpler, yet it still manages to get things just right. There is a tiny icon that appears whenever a new tab is opened with this extension installed. This little icon means that it's about to show some content, and once activated, it opens a new tab with the Prowl site right in the header. Browsing through the extension, one can see all sorts of things, like a list of top searches, the most popular blog posts, best deals, and so much more. Other than this, there are also two useful features that come with this extension: list questions, and post on social media. While this thing might not be as fancy as other browser extensions available, it gives people a quick and easy way to get things done, and it does so in a very efficient manner. How to set up Xamarati's extension: This add-on is not really different from most other extensions that come with a great design, but what's brilliant about it is that it comes bundled with a list question feature: show the list of your most frequently visited sites, as well as previous items that you've viewed. This great feature helps make the extension into a multi-purpose browser. Users with more than one tab open at a time can utilize the feature from the Xamarati extension: use the feature to access previously visited sites, or ask for more things. Making
