You can use the most popular, effective content management system, Contao, to promote your company or website. The tool provides a convenient, user-friendly environment where you can easily add and modify content on your site. With this application, you are going to be able to publish articles to be displayed on the website, or be able to add special visual effects to them, such as the use of graphics, images and videos. All material on this site is the copyright of Vladislav Lichko, and you can copy and distribute this content in any way under the conditions of the Creative Commons 3.0 License.

Q: Getting a simple horizontal swipe to display the same content from the other page We are creating a voting page. The page has two links, one vote button (this page), and another link to a different page (different website). Our website uses z-index, and all the elements are stacked one after the other, when you click the vote button, the content moves to the right, making it appear that the other page is displayed in front. But we want a simple horizontal swipe to display the same content from the other page. What is the easiest way to make the same thing, but horizontal? (No z-index required) A: Just get the location of the mouse in your mousemove event and move the content accordingly. The entire purpose of the z-index is to keep 'everything' on one place. If you remove z-index, the content will overlap no matter where your mouse is. Something like this (I don't know how the z-index works on your site, so I wrote a quick example) HTML: Page Header This is a test page. Lorem ipsum dolor sit amet, consectetur adipiscing elit. Cras facilisis ante risus, nec viverra neque ultricies eget. Pellentesque a tortor mi. Curabitur porttitor, felis a gravida viverra, dolor justo porttitor velit, eu molestie eros magna vitae neque. Aenean sapien turpis, egestas quis molestie vitae, ultrices in neque. Integer ullamcorper
