
Does InstallShield LE make available an external serial number.

A: The correct answer is the serial number is in install shield display. You can log in to Q: Is the CMAKE_CXX_COMPILER set for a target created by file(GLOB)? I am struggling with native compiler on windows and would like to configure it via CMake. I have a test.cpp with main.cpp and I would like to compile test.cpp with g++ main.cpp. But when I use file(GLOB_RECURSE RCS "main.cpp" "*") set(GLOB_SOURCES ${RCS}) message("set(GLOB_SOURCES ${GLOB_SOURCES}") add_executable(exe ${GLOB_SOURCES}) the compiler is using the CMAKE_CXX_COMPILER, not the one from my environment. I am using Cygwin with the mingw32-compiler. How could I tell cmake to use my compiler? A: I believe CMake knows your working environment and does not assume the $PATH from which you invoked it. In such cases, you can try loading the proper path via find_program(executable PROGRAM) and passing it to your executable via SET(CMAKE_CXX_COMPILER PATH/TO/GCC/RELATIVE/TO/CXX).

Food Allergy There are several foods that typically cause food allergies in children and adults. Dermatologist-Dermatologists have been diagnosing and treating allergic reactions in patients for years. If you experience an allergic reaction from a food that you ingest, there are ways to help limit your exposure. Dermatologist-Dermatologist are equipped to perform detailed skin tests to assess which foods in your diet cause food allergies. It is important to see your dermatologist sooner rather than later if you are concerned about allergies to specific foods. The best way to limit contact with a food that causes an allergic reaction is to get allergy testing before you start eating foods that you've read about and those you have been avoiding. If you aren't able to see your dermatologist, there serial number. I have not received the serial . I am working on an existing InstallShield 2012 Limited Edition package (that was created and I have the licence key), that needs to build using Visual Studio 2012. I don't want to upgrade to VS2013 as it will also need a licence key. I found this registry entry: HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE\SOFTWARE\WOW6432Node\InstallShieldLimitedEdition\2013 (I didn't find this in Windows 8) I was able to extract the developer license key that I have used to register for the other VS 2012. It should be the same, right? A: I was able to solve my problem by: a) installing the VS2012 express b) installing the VS2012 express SDK (for the .Net framework) c) registering in the configuration panel the setup project created the setup, and created all components that were missing. I am starting from:

- VS2012 express setup project (not VS2013) - Setup and Deployment -> InstallShield Limited Edition - Installed Visual Studio 2012 express SDK (for the .Net framework) - Register the license key [Monitoring of vascular access and dialysis care in the Czech Republic--Czech and Slovak Society of Nephrology].
