Jurgen Locadia scores for Rangers The on-loan Atalanta goalkeeper has two weeks on his deal and was relieved to get his first Blues goal in a decade Jurgen Locadia scored a goal in his first appearance for Rangers Rangers took a step towards the Ladbrokes Premiership lead when Jurgen Locadia grabbed his first goal for the club in four years with a stunning free-kick against Inverness Caledonian Thistle. Goalkeeper Elvis Kamsoba had earlier made a howler as he dropped the ball and sent Jordan Stewart the wrong way with a one-on-one chance. Boss Mark Warburton was delighted his side came back from behind, admitting he was concerned after they suffered a second-half humbling in a 1-0 defeat to Aberdeen in their last game. Warburton said: "We have been a bit fortunate in our last couple of games. To say we are flattered is an understatement. We were concerned, and took our goal very seriously. "I have been a goalkeeper and not scored a goal in 20 years, so I can relate to that. But we would like to be more in control of games at this stage. The boys worked hard, they put up a good fight and got the result." Rangers felt a much-needed goal was a timely boost, with a record crowd of 11,810 in the Premiership attendance for the sides at the foot of the table on this biggest of nights. But there was no blow-out for Warburton's men, as they managed to survive despite enjoying plenty of possession and having 65 per cent of the possession, although Tom Rogic and Scott Vernon were the stand-out players on show. Toni Dainton's side were composed and classy to take the lead after 10 minutes. Elvis Kamsoba and Stewart both launched weak headers into the box and the goalkeeper could only scramble the ball away. Stewart slid in to meet it first, but he placed his shot off target and Kamsoba took advantage of an error from Kamil Wil

FDA Proposes End to Ban on Industry-Developed Genetic Tests Following a six-year process of developing guidelines for the use of DNA information in the agency's regulated product testing, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced today that it is proposing to withdraw its 2008 guidance on the use of personal genetic information in regulated products. The guidance, which applies to all FDA-regulated product categories, was a 2015 update of its guidance on "Genetic Information in Food Labeling." In accordance with 21st Century Cures Act provisions, the agency's proposed withdrawal focuses on consumer-facing genetic tests. "To ensure the continued safety of the nation's products and that the public receives appropriate and truthful information, the Agency is proposing to withdraw the 2008 guidance regarding the use of genetic information in the labeling of foods and dietary supplements," said FDA Acting Commissioner Ned Sharpless in a statement. "This action is in accordance with legislative requirements and reflects consumer preferences today for better information on the benefits and risks of a product. We are proposing this change of course because we must provide consumers and retailers with a new, streamlined approach to the regulatory oversight of genetic labeling." In 2008, the agency established guidance that addressed the regulation of consumer-facing genetic tests, including those that were intended to be used to determine whether a consumer has a specific illness. The guidance emphasized the need for genetic tests to be accurate, fair, non-misleading, properly vetted and without clinically unsubstantiated claims. It also stressed that consumers have the right to access genetic information and that it should be associated with a product or a family history. Following the passage of the 2016 Cures Act, however, the agency's goal was to focus on the risk-benefit assessment of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act (FD&C Act) as it relates to consumer-facing genetic tests. The new guidance, which would apply only to FDA-regulated products, would not address genetic tests used in the e79caf774b
