Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a wide band bandpass filter and a circuit therefor. 2. Description of the Related Art A time-domain reflectometry (TDR) system is used in a wideband control bus in a down-converter for a microwave remote signal receiver, and a wide band-pass band are essential to realize this. FIG. 1 shows a conventional input circuit for a wide band-pass filter. In this circuit, the filter with the impedance  $Z_{\text{sub.F}}$  having a 2-dB bandwidth of 20 GHz and the characteristic impedance  $Z_{\text{sub.O}}$  of 50.OMEGA. is required, but the filter elements of this type have an inductance  $2.\pi.\text{multidot}.Z_{\text{sub.C}}$  of several nH to several pH. Therefore, when a high power supply is used or a strong radio wave is inputted through a coaxial cable for the TDR system, a problem is caused in that the entire filter becomes unstable. FIG. 2 shows a conventional wide band-pass filter. In this conventional example, to stabilize the filter, a CR-cut filter is used, and the filter element of the CR-cut type has an inductance  $2.\pi.\text{multidot}.Z_{\text{sub.C}}$  of several nH to several pH and a resistance  $Z_{\text{sub.C}}$  of several m.OMEGA.. Therefore, when a high power supply is used or a strong radio wave is inputted through a coaxial cable for the TDR system, a problem is caused in that the entire filter becomes unstable. Also, when, for example, a high power radio wave having a frequency of several hundred MHz is inputted as in a circuit for a microwave control system, the attenuation characteristic of the filter is so deteriorated that distortion is caused in a time
