I have a good amount of PC users with Windows 10 and 7, and although the OS does have issues, these issues get fixed with some software and updates. Windows 7 is around for a while and some of the features that are introduced in it, are still applicable. Windows 7 still has the legacy files and the system files, which won't be accessible in a newer version of Windows. Even if you upgrade to a newer version of Windows 7, the programs that you have installed in it
