Making the Tough Call

Choosing a wedding photographer can be a tough decision. The right photographer can produce images that are ready for print and give you a cohesive look in your wedding album. The wrong photographer can introduce too much randomness, making you feel overwhelmed. Here are some questions to ask:

* How much do you budget for photography? **

You should know this number so that you can negotiate with photographers when you're working with them to find the right photographer. You can expect to shell out a minimum of $5,000 for a wedding (and as much as $7,000 for a high-end engagement session), but ask for more time and for a fee schedule to avoid surprises. * Where will you hold your reception?  Will it be in a large hotel ballroom or a small church hall? It will make a difference in the size of the photographer's equipment. * How many will you have around you?  How many people will be in the photos? If you plan to have the wedding featured in a magazine or on the cover of a newspaper or online, be aware that it's going to be a team effort. The better the photographer, the more people you can have around you. Usually, one of the three best-looking women or men in the wedding will take most of the photos for the magazine. * How much will it cost? * An out-of-town wedding in the United States can cost $5,000 to $7,000 for the wedding photography, and another $1,500 to $3,000 for the engagement session if you don't make the engagement session an in-town session. With any luck, your wedding photographer can negotiate with you to have a fee discounted if you are certain you want him or her. On the high end, you can expect to pay $25,000 to $40,000 for a top-shelf professional photographer.

The price can go much higher when you're dealing with a couple of high-end photographers who specialize in weddings. *

Days of the Future Clock
The Days of the Future Clock is a clock located in the tourist and convention center in downtown Las Vegas. The clock is in the rotunda of the arena, and displays the time in Pacific time. From this clock, which runs on 20 hours a day, there are two ways to find out what time it is at any given moment. One is to walk out of the rotunda in the direction of the clock (facing the front of the arena) and look at the clock, a second is to walk up the steps to the top of the arena and look at the clock that is to your right as you walk. It was built by Gennaro Muzzo in 1989 and has been the clock at the arena ever since. The clock is visible from the street below and not only can the time be read from it, but also what day it is, what the time is in other cities, and what time it will be in other major cities, and what time it will be in the rest of the world. It also displays what time it is in various countries throughout the world. The clock is also visible on the days of the Las Vegas Renaissance, Treasure Island, and various concerts and conventions that take place at the MGM Grand Arena. The clock is named after the Days of the Future from the 1950 science fiction book, The Time Machine, by H. G. Wells.
