Unzip it again and you'll get the original file instead of the corrupted one. Q: How to add one more condition to a MySQL query that allows only non-negative integers? I'm making a simple note-book app, where the user types the number of columns in a table. The conditions (columns should be only positive, but not less than 0) only allows integers, but float values are also possible. I have the following SQL query: SET @rownum = 0; SELECT @rownum:=@rownum+1 as row_number, note_body_columns_FK FROM note_body_columns_FK ORDER BY note_body_columns_FK; But, if I try to insert the value "1.5" in the "note_body_columns_FK" field, the result is not like it should be: How can I add another condition so the value will not be valid? Thanks in advance. A: You could replace 1.5

with a cast to float: ... , cast(1.5 as real) as note_body_columns_FK ... But, if your column is INT, a more elegant solution would be to change the datatype from INT to FLOAT. That way you don't need the cast at all. A: I don't think you can filter out noninteger values. You could use a CASE statement to return 0 instead of NULL or to return 1 for all values. SET @rownum = 0; SELECT @rownum:=@rownum+1 as row_number, case note_body_columns_FK when 1.5 then 1 when 0.5 then 1 to our database on 02/05/19 11:25A case of adult onset plasmacytoma of the mandible. Plasmacytoma or plasma cell myeloma is a malignancy that arises from mature plasma cells with no preceding signs or symptoms of multiple myeloma. It usually appears between the age of 40 to 60 years with a slight female predominance. Oral plasmacytomas are uncommon in adults and mostly reported from the mandible. A case of aplasmacytoma of the left mandible in an elderly male patient is described. This is the 22nd reported case of oral plasmacytoma to occur in adults. In a medical or dental field, in order to prevent an increase in bacteria and the like, in particular, a contamination of bacteria and the like in a patient's mouth, various kinds of oral hygiene equipments and oral hygiene methods are used. As a conventional oral hygiene method, there is a method of keeping an oral clean by rubbing, with a dental brush, a tongue and the like in a mouth portion which is a region of biting, and by rinsing the inside of a mouth with a mouth wash liquid. As such an oral hygiene equipment, there is known one which comprises a mouth-contacted portion, such as a tongue-contacted portion, and a spout member provided in the mouth-contacted portion for introducing a mouth wash liquid therein. In such an oral hygiene equipment, a mouth wash liquid will be introduced into a mouth portion through 1cdb36666d
