Catalog: SignMatrix™ for Windows .Elevation of plasma retinol-binding protein in patients with acute-on-chronic liver failure. Acute-on-chronic liver failure (ACLF) is associated with high morbidity and mortality. Vitamin A deficiency is common in ACLF, but no studies have been conducted to determine whether retinol-binding protein (RBP) is elevated in the plasma of patients with ACLF. To evaluate RBP concentrations in patients with acute liver injury and patients with ACLF. The study included 39 patients with acute liver injury, including 15 patients with hepatitis A, nine patients with hepatitis B, and 15 patients with alcoholic liver disease; 54 patients with ACLF, including six patients with hepatitis A, 13 patients with hepatitis B, four patients with alcoholic liver disease, 15 patients with cryptogenic liver failure, and 18 patients with schistosomiasis; and 55 healthy controls. RBP concentrations were measured by using an enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay, and RBP levels were compared among the patient groups and controls. The RBP concentrations in patients with acute liver
