Acute hyponatremia is a common disorder in critically ill neonates. However, information on the incidence and risk factors of this serious disease is limited in China. We searched MEDLINE, Embase, and Cochrane Library from January 2005 to November 2017 for fatal hyponatremic cases in neonates in China. Data were extracted from published reports, and risk factors were analyzed by meta-regression. In total, 47 cases of fatal acute hyponatremia in neonates were identified in China. The cases were predominantly males (male/female ratio: 1.45) and infants aged younger than 2 weeks (75.5%). Hyponatremia was mainly due to inappropriate overcorrection (76.6%) and the water-salt imbalance (76.6%). The incidence of hyponatremia increased with age. Hyponatremia was more frequent in infants with sepsis ($p = 0.013$), jaundice ($p = 0.037$), or respiratory distress ($p = 0.031$) than in those without. The pooled incidence in neonates with gastrointestinal disorders was higher than that in those without ($p = 0.015$), and the pooled incidence in neonates with respiratory distress was higher than that in those without ($p = 0.039$). Although the incidence of hyponatremia increased with age, we found higher incidence rates for sepsis, jaundice, respiratory distress, and gastrointestinal disorders. Some of these risk factors may be

The governor's arrest is a significant victory for the Occupy movement, which has been pushing for the release of Wisconsin's state budget documents since the beginning of the year. Far from being the fight of an isolated minority, the governor's arrest is a rallying point for all those who believe that the people deserve access to their government's information and that corporations should not be able to shield behind a cloak of secrecy. And the fact that the governor's arrest is still taking place is a symbolic victory that has sparked its own movement of solidarity and support around the world. The close of the week has seen the Wisconsin State Assembly pass a compromise budget plan by a wide margin and send it to the Governor. The agreement includes a 15% reduction in the structural deficit, a solid investment in the state's future and some key reforms. In spite of the deal, Gov. Scott

Walker continues to demand a constitutional convention to rewrite the state constitution and eliminate the state's 50-year-old open meetings law. He claims that his proposal is the only way to protect the public's interest. This claim is simply not true. Among others, Republicans should have come to the table with a proposal to fully fund pre-K education - the budget agreement does not do this - but they did not. And unlike the budget deal, no proposal was ever made to the public to eliminate wasteful spending of more than $2.5 billion. Walker's proposal is an attempt to mask cuts and hide the truth about the people of Wisconsin. It is not the solution to our economic problems. It's time for the people of Wisconsin to fight back and tell Gov. Walker and the Republican Legislature to find a real solution to our budget problems rather than a constitutional convention. First, the Budget

Agreement has not solved any problem. The budget agreement was negotiated by a Republican Governor and Democrat legislature which can lead to a lawsuit. It was not a deficit reduction plan nor it was a compromise. In fact, the budget agreement is nothing more than an outline for future budget problems - more cuts to education, cuts to our public employee collective bargaining rights and cuts to already underfunded programs. We already have a deficit that is increasing every year.

Like it or not, the budget agreement will increase the budget deficit by hundreds of millions of dollars. This is the opposite of what is needed to reduce the deficit. Walker says this compromise budget deal will allow him to move forward with his anti-union agenda. We
