It's too early to say what the impact will be from the high winds in the Midwest. Based on past events, however, I'd bet a lot of money that the bulk of the snow will be on the south side of the Ohio River. It's funny, the storm that brings snow to Memphis is often a better snowstorm than the one that happens further south. And I'll bet that's not because of Lake Michigan or Lake Erie vs. the Ohio. It's because when the snow does fall on the riverside of the Ohio, it's more cold and less wet than the land-side snow. It could bring seven, eight, or even 10 inches in Nashville, but the buck stops here at Clarksdale. It could only bring 4.5 to 5 in Memphis. 6 Responses to "A Winter Storm Becomes A Nor'easter" It's hard to tell from news reporting, but I don't think Memphis has received more than 6". I'll be at my sister's in Goodlettsville, TN if it matters. ?There's a certain stigma that seems to crop up whenever the word "journalism" is bandied about. We know it, journalists know it. Even journalists who want to be good know it. And this is what I try to remember. Journalism is not an anti-corruption movement. It is not a people's right to know movement. It is not a bunch of people picking on a company or an individual. It is not a craven exercise in self-righteousness. It is a dispassionate record of what happened. You. Me. Everyone. Nobody else. We all work for the story. It's called the story because we want to make sense of it all. We don't want to just see what happened. We want to make sense of it, where it came from. What happened. What is happening now. Why it matters to us. Journalism is about digging. It's about investigating. It's about finding the truth. And by truth, I don't mean the absurd, self-serving word that I am fond of using that has become a byword of its own. Instead, I mean discovering

Q: "Men's" versus "a male" I am wondering if the word "male" can be swapped with "men's" in the title "A men's beauty pageant is in town". A: In this case, it doesn't work. You could consider [A]gender show A: "male" (which is a word) and "men" (which is a noun) are both acceptable in usage. "a male" is grammatically incorrect, though. "A male" is a plural, so it's required that you use a plural verb. { "name": "Theme-baselowres", "displayName": "baselowres", "description": "baselowres Skin for Mattermost", "version": "0.2.0", "author": { "name": "Bryan Eddins", "email": "bryan@edkins.me", "role": "Lead" }, "maintainer": "support@thefactory.com", "license": "GPL-2.0", "preferGlobal": true, "config": { "site_fonts": ["Poppins", "Roboto", "Roboto-Regular"], "palettes": ["bf500"], "categories": ["Theming"] }, "routes": [{ "method": "GET",
