“It gives the player unique attributes, such as an increased rate of speed, reaction time and stamina,” said David Rutter, vice president of operations at EA SPORTS. “We’ve also given players the ability to make decisions based on individual moments and the natural variation in a football match. How an action was carried out, and how the movement of players around you has changed, will all factor into a player’s decision-making.” For the first time in franchise history, EA SPORTS has incorporated a series of “AI Zones,” which allow players to take control of aspects of gameplay from any position. The AI Zones are the “wind-up” feature of FIFA 22 and are done so to provide a different experience on both sides of the pitch. The “Road to Glory” mode is now instigated within the game. Instead of taking the AI in at the beginning of a match, players will take control of the team at the very moment they enter the match. The new “Icons” system allows players to brand their skills and attributes, such as heading, dribbling, and shooting ability, with special icon trails. For example, Xavi is “The King of the Dribble” or Wayne Rooney is “The Creator.” In addition, players can now customize their kits and stickers. General First Person View now available when viewing player stats Limited Edition New Standard Edition and Elite Edition introduced. Colors can now be switched. New “Color Confusion” issue may occur. Intelligent Player Transfer System will be added to the new Standard Edition. The number of transfers will be limited in the mode. How to use: Press the "R2" button while browsing the Transfer Market. Want to change your original squad? Press the "P" button to access your journey. Now your squad can be changed at any time. Player Data and Attributes New default attribute "Momentum," which highlights a player's recent successful scoring efforts and assists, will be added to each position. This attribute will be tracked for a player on FIFA, FIFA Street, and Pro Clubs. New default attribute "Decision Making," which highlights a player's recent successful tactical decisions, will be added to each position. This attribute will be tracked on
