Biocide reducing growth of Legionella pneumophila on surfaces in drinking water distribution systems. Legionellae are suspected of being causative agents of some community-acquired pneumonias. To prevent legionellosis in drinking water distribution networks, surfaces in cooling towers and hot water distribution systems were treated with hydrogen peroxide (HP) and bromide.

HP is a broad spectrum biocide used on drinking water distribution systems and the surface of cooling towers and hot water distribution systems, for which its efficacy has been proven over a decade. Ammonia bromide is a biocide with a selective action against Legionella pneumophila.

Twenty-eight different pneumophila strains were incubated together with peroxide, bromide or ammonia bromide under defined conditions to study their growth. Biocide treated surfaces showed a much lower growth rate than untreated surfaces. Ammonia bromide had a much more pronounced effect than bromide. HP was not able to replace a concomitant biocide regime. In competition experiments with Legionella pneumophila, the HP concentrations being required for biocide performance were much lower than the usual HP concentrations used in drinking water. Biocide performance may also decrease when the surfaces are coated with native organic film. With HP concentrations being applied on surfaces, that have been cleaned with bleach, the cleaning effect may increase, making it more difficult for the bacteria to attach to a surface.namespace

It is released from the hypothalamus and stimulates the release of luteinizing hormone (LH) and follicle stimulating hormone (FSH) from the pituitary. This stimulation is central for the onset of sexual maturation in the male and for the female reproductive cycle. A deficiency or an absence of GnRH results in hypogonadism and hypogonadotropic hypogonadism in men, and amenorrhoea in women. The GnRH analogue [D-Ser (But)6]-GnRH has a high bioavailability after subcutaneous administration and a long duration of action with linear pharmacokinetics. Following s.c. administration, [D-Ser(But)6]-GnRH has been shown to induce a pituitary LH-surge and ovarian follicular development. More specifically, s.c. [D-Ser(But)6]-GnRH has been shown to induce ovarian follicular development in normal men [see Koide et al., J. Reprod. Med., Vol. 42, p. 103 (1997) and Resler et al., Human Reproduction, Vol. 10, p. 1712 (1995)]. The importance of GnRH in men is further indicated by studies showing that administration of GnRH in combination with FSH to hypogonadal men results in spermatogenesis [see Sim et al., Human Reproduction, Vol. 10, p. 2403 (1995)] Subcutaneous or intranasal administration of GnRH agonists has also been shown to induce ovulation in women [see e.g. Gruber et al., Fertility and Sterility, Vol. 60, p. 42 (1993)]. In general, GnRH agonists are highly potent and elicit a prompt and uniform stimulation of the HP 1cdb36666d

The 796 cases include many in the northeastern provinces of Nakhon Ratchasima and Udon Thani where there have been some clusters of patients, officials said. Fears of the spread of the virus were exacerbated last week when a flight carrying 38 people from Vietnam landed in Chiang Rai, Thailand, where two passengers were later confirmed positive, with 14 other people who stayed in the same room as them later testing positive. All passengers had spent hours together in Hong Kong, at the low point of the virus' spread in Asia. Chiang Rai governor Narongsak Osotthanakorn said on Sunday that workers at a Chinese restaurant where the two passengers ate are under quarantine, but added that he does not expect the outbreak to worsen. "We think it will be contained," he said. A Thai health official, Chatchawan Pukkaew, said that the main priority is to ensure that infected patients get the right care. "Everybody should follow their government's advice. It is not an easy disease to fight," she said. More than 2,500 people have been infected in China and the number of deaths has topped 60. On Friday, China reported 41 new deaths in the previous 24 hours, raising the overall toll to more than 1,500. Thailand reported its first case on Jan. 5, just days after it became the first country to confirm the virus' first case. The 1,000th case was reported on Wednesday. Authorities say they have placed the patient under strict home quarantine and are closely monitoring 300 other people for signs of the illness. The authorities have not revealed the patient's identity

A: This is from the issue tracker for ArcSoft Portrait Plus 3.0.0.400+Patch (Full Edition Software 2013).rar on Github (posted by tamanik with this issue: "Cannot compile.EXE's from.MOD's"): I did a research and the issue is caused by the DLL's linked to Fodex Effect. It appears, that the DLL's with version number 11.1.1801.1 (including SP5) are compatible, while for version 11.1.1701.2 they are not compatible with ArcSoft Portrait Plus 3.0.0.400+. I noticed that to make it work the DLL's with version number 11.1.1801.1 should be moved to C:\Program Files (x86)\ArcSoft\ArcSoft Portrait Plus 3.0.0.400+Patch. Note, that the DLL's for version 11.1.1701.2 are not compatible, however, they do not have any impact on the.MOD import. I downloaded the.EXE's from the
